

Alvin and Isabelle Liberman Memorial Workshop

May 30, 2014

Bousfield Rm 160, Liberman Room
Department of Psychology
University of Connecticut, Storrs

1:00-1:45 p.m. Visit Al's and Isabelle's resting places to lay stones.*

Writing Systems, Reading, and Brain Mechanisms

- 3:00-3:20 Language by ear and by eye: The Libermans' perspective
Michael Turvey, University of Connecticut and Haskins Laboratories
- 3:20-3:50 Evaluating the orthographic depth hypothesis in Hindi
Anurag Rimzhim, University of Connecticut and Haskins Laboratories
- 3:50-4:20 The Korean writing system
Yang Lee, Gyeongsang National University and Haskins Laboratories
- 4:20-4:50 The literate brain: how learning to read modifies language systems
Ken Pugh, University of Connecticut and Haskins Laboratories
- 4:50-5:20 A framework for understanding cross-language variation in the organization of the reading system
Jay Rueckl, University of Connecticut and Haskins Laboratories
- 5:20 General Discussion

The speakers and invited guests will gather for dinner at the Carello and Turvey home at 6:30 pm. All are welcome to join us at Sweet William's Pub beginning at 8:30 pm.

*The Jewish Cemetery is on Rte. 32, opposite the Mansfield Drive-In (just south of the intersection of Rtes. 31 and 32). Turn into the cemetery (there is no sign) and take the immediate right onto the dirt road. Park alongside the road, walk down to the end and go through the gate on the left. Carello and Turvey will be there to guide you.